Unassigned computer activities

In this article:

- How to assign "Unassigned computer activities"?
- How to get rid of unassigned computer activities?

If you use the TimeCamp desktop application you may notice an additional entry on your timesheet titled "Unassigned computer activities". This entry contains time gathered by the application but not yet assigned to any task.

Unassigned computer time appears on your timesheet automatically if you didn't track time on a task but the desktop application was still running. The time of this entry doesn't count into the sum of time collected for a specific day.

The desktop app will register computer time and activities only when you start a timer for a task. If the timer is not running, no activities and computer usage will be registered. It means that unassigned computer activities entry won't appear on your Timesheet anymore. The start and end time of your working day will be matching the timeframes of your first and last time entry.
